Goodbye Seniors!

JUNE 6, 2024 BY MIKA HIGGINS-WOO

To the disappointment of many, April 26 marked the last day of school for this year's seniors. Before they graduate, The Daltonian caught up with a handful of Seniors and asked what they would miss most about New York City once they left for college. Read on to discover some creative and heartwarming responses!

When I leave for college, the thing I will miss most about NYC is...

Martine Gregoire: the small parks and playgrounds I grew up in.

Rex Popick: the freedom of being able to get anywhere at any time by public transit/biking/walking.

Milo Pishev: the cherry blossom path in Central Park.

Annika Jha: seeing my friends, eating good bagels, and going on walks in Central Park.

Angelie Pereyra: is CAVA, it's like Dig or Fresh & Co but Mediterranean, and cheaper. A perfect bowl has: saffron rice, grilled chicken, tzatziki, hummus, cucumbers and avocado. Thank god we didn't have one by Dalton or I would've broken the bank getting a bowl every day. My commitment to this place is unwavering. Unfortunately they don't have CAVA in Northampton MA. Could always fulfill my cravings after an hour train ride to Boston though!

Quinton Gallant: biking my little heart out.

Naomi Gomel: the diverse community of people from all over the world, Central Park's running paths and cherry blossoms, and the city lights at nighttime.

Mollie Fink: refusing to get my drivers license because 'I live in New York, I don't need it!'

Mirabelle Zhang: the ease of getting to a ton of different places by foot and public transportation (even if said transportation is very finicky).

Coby Kramarsky: how much interesting theater is available!

Zach Berg: my family and friends.

Zoë Lester: being surprised by someone or something every time I leave the house in a way that makes me smile.

Avery Leppo: the relaxing feeling of gazing out my bedroom windows to view the lights of the city skyline at night.

Hillary Silver: my friends and my dog.

Sam Weidman: the Hippo Park sledding hill at sunset.

Sometimes we take New York City for granted, but it is certainly an amazing place to grow up. From Hippo Park sledding to the Central Park cherry blossom path to interesting theater, we are so lucky to live in such a diverse and interesting location. We wish the Seniors all the best wherever they are off to next. We will miss you, Seniors!
